Two Graduate Teaching Assistantships Available

School Psychology Program

2020-21 Academic Year

Two 0.49 assistantships (19 hours per week) are available for the upcoming academic year in the School Psychology program. Applicants should demonstrate (1) proven leadership, maturity, and flexibility (2) the ability to work efficiently and independently, and (3) effective interpersonal skills, problem solving skills, and decision making skills.

Graduate assistants in these positions will be responsible for helping to coordinate and organize practica experiences within the program and the Counseling and School Psychology Clinic. In addition, advanced graduate assistants will be responsible for supervising doctoral students enrolled in practica courses. Applicants will be assigned to one or a combination of the school psychology practica based on past experiences and practica enrollment. These assistantship assignments will be to the Assessment Course sequence and Clinic-Based Practicum with some additional duties to the general School Psychology Program. Individual responsibilities will be assigned based on level of preparedness, existing program needs, and, where possible, students' interests. For more information contact Dr. Scott Napolitano at snapolitano2@unl.edu.

To apply, submit (1) a one-page cover letter stating your interest and describing your qualifications, (2) a copy of your current vita, and (3) a completed application form (found on this site). The due date is Friday, March 6, 2020.
